

Poetry Competition

So, by now you will have had a few weeks at home and have had time to think about things and work out what being in social isolation really means. Your challenge this week is all about that- what social isolation has meant for you.

To begin with just write down some ideas about what you are feeling. You might for example like to think about how you felt when you knew it was happening- you might have been worried or scared or you might have looked forward to not going to school- just think back. Then think about how things have worked out- you might be feeling bored or you might miss your friends etc. Taking the letters of the word Isolation write one thought for each letter so for example:

I nside even though the sun is shining

S
ad not to see my friends

O pportunities to spend more time with my family...

...and so on for all the letters of the word.

Then send it to us and we will put some of our favourites on our webpage.

We have provided a sheet with letters on to print if you would like but you might prefer to design your own- just remember to write the letters down the page like we have and not across!
